

Cancer books by Daniel Weber

Introduction to Integrative Oncology - $29.95

This book presents herbs, compounds and supplements which have research and proven clinical application to support patients in cancer recovery. Many cancer patients seek out complementary treatments, by some estimates up to 80 percent. In many cases these are either ineffective or dangerous. This work presents herbs, compounds, and supplements that have research and proven clinical applications to support patients in cancer recovery. It also details studies of CAM in cancer treatment, giving both positive and negative reports. There is a comprehensive annotated listing of CAM methods and medicinals from both Western and Chinese practice for use with cancer therapy, chemotherapy, and radiotherapy as well as for chemotherapy and radiotherapy side effects.

Inflammation and the Seven Stochastic Events of Cancer - $45

The occurrence of tumors is a complex biological phenomenon, involving multiple factors, multiple bases, multiple procedures and multiple stages. This book systematically elaborates the seven stochastic (randomly predictable) events of cancer, and the close relation between inflammation and cancer. Though the relation between inflammation and cancer is clear according to current research, the potential mechanism of inflammation's role in cancer is still unclear, and there are many questions left unanswered. This book explores the role of inflammation in the occurrence and development of cancers, as well as its relationship to stress, angiogenesis, cell-to-cell communication, and metastasis. In particular, it introduces the applications of Chinese herbal medicine and their compounds to cancer and inflammation, and the mechanisms contributing to the integration of TCM and modern oncology medicine.

Chinese Herbal Medicine and Psychophysiology - $19.95

'Chinese Herbal Medicine and Psychophysiology' continues Daniel Weber's work at integrating traditional and orthodox medicines, of bringing rational scientific understandings to ancient insights. In this book Daniel examines the parallels between traditional medicines of the East and the emerging science of Psychophysiology. In particular, Daniel discusses the theories of vagal tone forwarded by Porges and Cozolino, and the traditional Chinese medicine concept of san jiao. When examining psychological distress, we now understand that the psyche/soma is a multilevel system, which embraces the whole human. Daniel's latest book contributes to the development of this new era of medicine by bringing together the best of East and West and the best of ancient and modern.
