

Chinese Herbal Formulas for Veterinarians

John CHEN, Tina CHEN, Signe BEEBE, Michael SALEWSKI

This work integrates historical foundations of Chinese herbal medicine with contemporary research and clinical applications in veterinary medicine.

While maintaining a firm focus on equipping today's TCM professional for superior practice, the authors carefully combine perspectives on pharmacology, relevant research, and clinical experience to provide a clear understanding for veterinarians who wish to integrate Chinese herbal medicine into their clinical practice.

It features detailed traditional and veterinary uses, preparation, administration, dosages, combinations, cautions, contraindications and toxicology. It further discusses the pharmacology of herbal medicinal formulas, with insights on concurrent uses of herbal formulas and pharmaceuticals. There is extensive documentation from clinical studies and published research, as well as pre-publication review contributions from over 140 academic, clinical, research and regulatory professionals.

Commentaries, case studies, and suggested acupuncture therapies accompany each formula presented.
